

- Initialize an empty hashMap
- Loop through both the index and the value of the array at the same time (there is a python function that lets you do this)
- Make a variable to store the difference of the target number minus the value of the current element
 - if diff is in hashMap
 - return the index of diff and the index you are currently iterating through
 - hashMap[value of the array] = index of the array